

MINGO-CO MAY YET BE SPARED THE ODIUM OF SOLDIER RULE.

Battalion of 400 Men is Despatched From Camp
Sherman to W. Va.

GOVERNOR REQUESTED County Officials In Touch With Mine Trouble Hope to Handle Situation

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Nov. 27.—
Following the despatch of a provisional battalion of 400 men from Camp
Sherman, Chillicothe, O., to Mingo-co, W. Va., at the request of Governor
John J. Cornwell, Mingo authorities
Saturday expressed the belief that President Wilson would also grant the request of Governor Cornwell and place Mingo-co under martial law.
Clashes of miners and deputies continue.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 27.—
Explaining his request that martial law be declared in Mingo-co, and that federal troops be sent to the coal fields Gov. Cornwell issued the following: "I have no other alternative. I have accordingly asked Gen. Reed, commanding the fifth army corps for the troops and am requesting the president to proclaim the county under martial law allowing the circuit court however, to proceed with the trial of offenses heretofore committed."
"Mingo-co officials in their wire to me expressed the opinion that the troops might be able to deal with the situation without declaring martial law."

"I have not concurred in that view however, for the time for temporizing is past. Everybody has had fair warning. Local authorities were given every opportunity to deal with the situation. Men were assaulted and beaten in the presence of soldiers who were powerless to prevent it. I refuse to make sign posts of them again."
"Our state police force is not sufficiently large to handle it. Inasmuch as I have been obliged to call federal troops a second time, I think it proper to ask the president to issue a proclamation giving them the power to deal with the situation. That I have done."

CONSTANTINE WANTS TO STAGE BIG SHOW

PARIS, Nov. 27.—A strong rumor was current in well informed circles here today that Constantine of Greece has decided to renounce the crown of the Hellenic Kingdom in favor of his eldest son. In doing so it is believed he would yield to pressure from the entente and France which has gone on record as absolutely opposed to his return as ruler of his country. In some quarters, however, the rumor is not credited, the opinion being advanced that Constantine is going to make a triumphant return to Athens.

elect Harding today inspected the Atlantic defenses of the Panama Canal,

Dean John J. Adams of the law school of the Ohio State university, in addressing the guests at the banquet given by the Coshocton-co alumni of Ohio State university at the Park hotel Friday evening, predicted a great future for the universities of the middle west, particularly those of Ohio.

He laid emphasis upon the fact that the problem now, was not one of getting students, but a problem of financing, to take care of the tremendous influx of students in the universities.

He stated that in the last few years the number of students at Ohio State university has increased from 2400 to about 8000 and that it is probable that in a few more years there will be at least 10,000 students enrolled.

By comparison Dean Adams showed how Ohio State university had outstripped the eastern colleges in growth in the last few years. He said that with the completion of the new stadium, Ohio State university would be one of the foremost universities in the world in inter-collegiate athletics and physical development of the students.

Attorney C. Homer Durand acted as toastmaster and introduced each speaker.

Attorney Warner Pomerene was the first speaker called upon. He gave a talk regarding the new stadium being planned.

Mrs. Warner Pomerene gave an interesting talk upon the work done for women at Ohio State university.

Dr. J. G. Smailes and Dr. W. R. Davis responded with talks about the progress of the medical college of Ohio State university. Dr. Smailes declared that, in his estimation, the medical college of Ohio State university was equal to that of Johns Hopkins and Chicago university.

Attorney Durand toasted the Ohio State football team as "the greatest football team in history." He then gave a short talk on the subject of

LIQUOR STOCKS IN WAREHOUSES UNAFFECTED BY COURT'S RULING

Wayne B. Wheeler, General
Counsel For Anti-Saloon League So Declares

EXPLAINS SITUATION Says There Are Plenty of Ways to Prevent Leakage of Bonded Stock

COLUMBUS, Nov. 27.—The thirsty who expect to get liquor out of bonded warehouses for private use are likely to meet disappointment is the belief expressed here today by Wayne B.
Wheeler, of Washington, D. C., general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League of America. Attorney Wheeler came here to attend a meeting of officials of the league.

"The decision of the supreme court does not cover bonded warehouse liquors, except those actually in the possession of the person who had such liquors in a private warehouse room under his exclusive control and for his personal use," said Wheeler.

"Such liquors are tax paid and not under the control of the government.
It is doubtful if liquors in a public warehouse, even if tax is paid, where the owner does not have them in his possession and access to them at any time, come within the decision."

"There are other means available under the transportation clause and the permit system if used properly to prevent a great amount of liquor from being withdrawn, or transported to evade the purpose of the law, which is expressly stated 'to prevent the use of intoxicating liquor as a beverage.'
"The permit system has not been administered as carefully as it should have been, but the law enforcements are tightening up, and officials are revoking permits that are abused. The conditions will get better from now on. All permits expire next month and there will be a house cleaning."

MAYOR INDICATES CHARGES WILL BE PLACED AGAINST DRIVER OF TRUCK

Mayor W. S. Tish said Saturday that he probably would take action against R. A. Dell, Canton, alleged owner of the Studebaker truck that was wrecked on the West Lafayette road having in his possession and on his machine a license plate that bore the figures 71,660. The state records show the license in question was issued to James L. Barker, Columbus, owner of a Ford truck.

The mayor is expected to take action against Dell soon.

The mayor did not state the direct charge that will be preferred.

The 68 hams removed from the truck were stored away at a farmhouse on the West Lafayette road last Wednesday following the accident.
They were shipped to Canton Saturday to the Armour-Swift agency by Russell Hanlon of the Hanlon undertaking establishment.

THE JOLLIER

Our humble opinion is that it requires remarkable devotion for a fellow to carry water to a sick woman in his bare feet these chilly days.

"Man shot, knife found by his side," was the way the headline read. Now who do you suppose poisoned him?

Don't make fun of the restaurant coffee. You may be old and weak yourself some day.

There's some advantage in having a budding young man in the family. Dad is relieved of the necessity of explaining the presence of strange hairpins in the tonneau.

Who remembers when baby brother could reach high enough to cling to mamma's skirt?

OBITUARY
John E. Hart died at the home of his daughter Mrs. Jacob Rodock, at Keene, Tuesday, Nov. 23, 1920, aged 77 years, 7 months, 25 days.

He was a member of the Disciple church from youth of which he always held fast faith. He was fond of his Bible and often said that he was ready and willing to go when the master called. We feel his loss but rejoice in his gain.

He was united in marriage to Miss Jane Foster, September 19, 1867. She preceded him to the grave five years. To this union were born six children. Columbus Hart, of West Lafayette, Calvin and Orton of Wadsworth, O.; Mrs. S. B. Linebaugh and Mrs. Jacob Rodock of Keene, Ohio and Miss Nettie Hart of Columbus, Ohio. SMALL AUDIENCE HEARS LECTURE BY N. C. R. ENVOY

The business lecture at the Central high school building Friday under the auspices of a cash register company was poorly attended considering the importance of the theme. "Getting the most out of advertising" is perhaps of keen interest to every store owner and clerk. Every business man and employee, whatever the nature of his business, could have been benefited by the plain business talk Friday evening.

The first 15 minutes of the program were devoted to a tour, by movies, of the cash register manufactory. Pictures of their daylight factory system of lighting were shown, their method of using safety devices on all dangerous machinery, and numerous other plans for making the work of their employees pleasant.

The pictures told how problems of slum districts have been solved by directing the energies of the boys and girls to gardening, making money for the children, giving them an interesting occupation, and at the same time producing food.

George M. Gray made a few remarks on the importance of moving pictures, motors, and magazines in the higher education of people over the country, and then introduced Mr. Farley, of Dayton, who gave the talk on retail business, illustrating his points by moving pictures and slides.

In order to get his audience "tuned up" Mr. Farley requested them to sing "America," "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles," and "Smiles." Mr. Farley said his first object was to try to explain to the merchants how to get the most out of retailing, also to do good in the community by making some profitable suggestions to the merchants and clerks on how to have satisfied customers and at the same time make a profit. He said that the company he represents had collected data on this subject for a number of years. The first point he made was that the only successful store was the one that was thoroughly organized. In 1919 were 4,013 legal failures of which he claimed that 35 per cent were due to incompetence and inexperience.

Mr. Farley said that too many chiefs carried all the responsibility on their own shoulders. He suggested that every business man should try to keep his mind free from the smaller details and assign tasks of importance to his employees according to their number and capacity. Each employee should bear part of the load. This gives the employee a greater interest in the business and creates an incentive for a better business in their departments.

Next Mr. Farley turned to advertising. He said that newspaper advertising was the least expensive and the most effective manner of reaching the customer every day. By way of the newspaper the seller is privileged to talk to all of his customers every day. He said that persistence wins the confidence of the buyer and counseled the use of a different ad every day, each ad featuring just one article. Desire is most easily stimulated by pictures, but too many pictures confuse the mind of the reader. He has emphasized the main points in newspaper advertising as being brevity, simple words and short sentences.

Window displays were then discussed and illustrated on the screen. Mr. Farley explained that good window displays were essential in the successful selling of goods. To have a good window display it is necessary to change often, not to fill the window with articles unrelated to each other but to combine the usefulness of the articles, and to be careful that distracting display cards are not shown with them.

Mr. Farley took up the subject of retail selling. He gave pointers on how to meet customers, how to treat them while selling, and how to have a satisfied, friendly customer leave the store. If a clerk has acquired a correct and pleasing manner to all of his customers, then all that is necessary is a knowledge of his goods and pride in his work. But there is quite a number who do not have these requirements and Mr. Farley suggested a very good plan, that has been tried and marked as a success. This plan is for the employer to organize a school among his employees and teach them the fine points of their particular duties.

URGES ART CHAIR IN U. S. CABINET

John C. Freund.

John C. Freund of New York is leading a campaign to arouse public sentiment for the establishment of a secretary of fine arts in the president's cabinet. He is editor of "Musical America" and president of the "Musical Alliance of the United States." Seven years ago he brought to public attention the fact that this country was then spending $800,000,000 a year on music, musical education and musical industries. He is seventy-two.

Ohio Conference Title Undecided

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 27.—The Ohio conference football season came to a close with the championship again undecided. Wittenberg and Wooster were tied for first place, both teams finishing the season without a defeat. It is the second consecutive year that the "no championship" banner has been hung out. Last year Wooster, Wittenberg and Oberlin tied for the state title. Only eight conference teams played today, the others having ended their season last Saturday. Denison lost its first game of the season today, bowing to Wittenberg by a 7 to 0 score. It was Wittenberg's sixth victory. Wooster ran its string of victories up to seven by defeating Mt. Vernon 7 to 3. Cincinnati university defeated Miami 7 to 0, and Western Reserve, thru its defeat of Case 2 to 0, on its first game of the season. Two teams finished the year without having won a game. Otterbein lost the five contests on its schedule, and Hiram was unable to score as many as its opponents in six attempts.

WHAT HAS BECOME OF OLD-TIME QUIET SABBATH IN THE COUNTRY?

Roadside Marketing

Sunday is now the biggest market day of the week.

The automobile has caused this big change in rural life. Once upon a time the city housewife put a basket on her arm and marketed at the corner grocery, while the farmer got up in the middle of the night to bring his products to town. Now the buyers come to the farm. The whole family on its Sunday jaunt into the country does the marketing for the week, while the farmer spreads fruits and vegetables in attractive array at his own doorstep.

The great growth in this practice of roadside marketing is developing the demand for automobiles in two ways, say motor tradesmen preparing for the annual Cleveland automobile show, January 22 to 25. More city families want cars for going into the country, and the increased prosperity of the farmer leads him to buy more and better automobiles.

MINGO-CO MAY YET BE SPARED THE ODIUM OF SOLDIER RULE.

Battalion of 400 Men is Dispatched From Camp Sherman to W. Va.

GOVERNOR REQUESTED County Officials In Touch With Mine Trouble Hope to Handle Situation

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Nov. 27.—Following the dispatch of a provisional battalion of 400 men from Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, O., to Mingo-co, W. Va., at the request of Governor John J. Cornwell, Mingo authorities Saturday expressed the belief that President Wilson would also grant the request of Governor Cornwell and place Mingo-co under martial law. Clashes of miners and deputies continue.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 27.—Explaining his request that martial law be declared in Mingo-co, and that federal troops be sent to the coal fields, Gov. Cornwell issued the following: "I have no other alternative. I have accordingly asked Gen. Reed, commanding the fifth army corps for the troops and am requesting the president to proclaim the county under martial law allowing the circuit court however, to proceed with the trial of offenses heretofore committed. "Mingo-co officials in their wire to me expressed the opinion that the troops might be able to deal with the situation without declaring martial law. "I have not concurred in that view however, for the time for temporizing is past. Everybody has had fair warning. Local authorities were given every opportunity to deal with the situation. Men were assaulted and beaten in the presence of soldiers who were powerless to prevent it. I refuse to make sign posts of them again. "Our state police force is not sufficiently large to handle it. Inasmuch as I have been obliged to call federal troops a second time, I think it proper to ask the president to issue a proclamation giving them the power to deal with the situation. That I have done."

COAL IN COLUMBUS IS CUT $1.00 A TON

COLUMBUS, Nov. 27.—Announcing that he has purchased 30 cars of coal for the municipal light plant at $4.00 a ton which is from 75 cents to $1.00 lower than prices quoted him three weeks ago for the same quality of fuel coal, H. Clayton Cain, secretary of the city board of purchasers said lower quotations on nut, pea and slack coal are on the way.

His expectation he said is based on the belief that from 1000 to 1500 cars of coal would be diverted daily after Dec. 1 from the Lake trade to other destinations, due to the fact that no insurance will be issued on lake shipments after Dec. 1.

CONSTANTINE WANTS TO STAGE BIG SHOW

PARIS, Nov. 27.—A strong rumor was current in well informed circles here today that Constantine of Greece has decided to renounce the crown of the Hellenic Kingdom in favor of his eldest son. In doing so it is believed he would yield to pressure from the entente and France which has gone on record as absolutely opposed to his return as ruler of his country. In some quarters, however, the rumor is not credited, the opinion being advanced that Constantine is eager to make a triumphal return to Athens.

HARDING INSPECTS CANAL'S DEFENSES

COLON, C. Z., Nov. 27.—President-elect Harding today inspected the Atlantic defenses of the Panama Canal, the submarine base, and the coaling station as well as the sites of the proposed new defense works and the quarters for the proposed increased naval and military forces.

The people of Colon thru the official spokesman have urged the president to use his influence, when he gets to the White House, to further the development of the Atlantic entrance of the Panama.

Senator Harding has not committed himself with regard to requests for an increase to employees which is endorsed by the labor organizations. It is understood Mr. Harding in his conversations with officials here has discouraged the proposal of drawing up a formal memorandum on the various criticisms and complaints from Canal Zone employees until he has been inaugurated as president of the U. S.

PILGRIMS, 1620-1920.

By Helen Shaw Thompson (Member American Mayflower Council)

I seem to walk the ways they walked,
To see the sights they saw;
I seem to hear their voices, soft
But stern as their own law.

I seem to see white fingers fly
At "card" and wheel and loom;
I see the touch of Pilgrim hand
In every cleanly room.

I love to live with them, in dreams
And pray that I and mine
May keep, with faith unswayed,
Their standards for our line:

A Sabbath set apart for God,
That he might honored be;
And man a day of rest be given
That long life he should see:

A righteous brotherhood of men
Whose dealings, just and fair,
Should be the Nation's saving strength
To all who enter there:

In love preferring other men
Before themselves, if need;
And always with their trust in God—
These were their laws and creed.

For all who came and all who come,
The laws they made still stand,
And in our own allegiance, we Subscribe to their command.

Utica Man Speaking Before Franklin Farmers Scores Apathy and Carelessness of Both in Allowing Few Men to Monopolize the Marketing, Manufacture and Distribution of Wool and Woolens

Apathy, amounting to little less than ignorance and carelessness on the part of the farmer who feeds and tends a flock of sheep and clips the wool, and of the consumer who pays for a suit of clothes made of wool without getting it was blamed in a large measure for the disrupted condition of the wool market in the United States Saturday afternoon in an address by W. W. Reynolds, state institute speaker, at the Franklin farmers institute.

In his address Mr. Reynolds, whose home is at Utica, Ohio, called the wool grower the most abused and most stubborn of men. His remarks were enlightening and pertinent, but little hope for immediate improvement in the situation was held out.

Mr. Reynolds furnished the press with the following outline of his address at the request of the Tribune and Times-Age. It follows:

"What is the Matter With Wool?"

By W. W. REYNOLDS

The Tribune and Times-Age has asked me for a copy of my speech at the Franklin Institute but I can only hand in the line I will follow. I never know what I will say until the eyes of the audience influence inspiration, personal contact destroys stereotype. Also, I have asked that questions be presented to me when I take the floor so I may be guided by the desires of the audience. This much I can warrant, I will touch the following points.

Wool growing has been the worst handicapped, abused and neglected of all our industries. You have the proof. Every other necessary product is spilling over the boundaries of the country and not one-third enough wool is grown to clothe the people. We grow one-quarter of the world's wheat, two-thirds of the cotton, and three-fourths of the corn and about one-fifth of the world's wool.

It has been the "bone of contention" between partisan politicians and has several massacres. If sheep men were not the gentlest, most peaceable and stubbornest of men they would not now be a flock in the United States. The whole cause of the trouble must be blamed on the wool growers. They breed and feed some sheep and look everything anyone wanted to "put over" them. They lived in peace by springs at the foot of the hills, working and planning to grow some good fibres which as soon as clipped were handed over to the first or second man that came for them at their terms.

There is a book, printed 70 years ago, in the Ohio State Library in which you can read A New Yorker finished shearing his sheep at dark and the next morning packed it away early in a dark corner. On going to the front door a wool buyer was there, and asked him if he had sold his wool and on getting a negative reply, asked if he could see it. He ran his gloved hand over it in the dark and said, "I am paying so much for wool," and the owner replied, "I will take a cent more for mine." The buyer paid him $20 down.

Millions and millions of pounds of wool have been sold for that "cent more."

While the price of every commodity has been fixed by intelligent organization, and intensive press agencies operated to depress raw material and elevate the price of the finished product the wool grower stood alone.

This assertion fits the wool growers of the world. In the southern hemisphere they are looking toward England, with sidelong glances at America, to see if some one will take the wool off their hands, and they will take it when ready at their own price. The sheep men by their neglect and indolence have invited a few men in America and England, not one-hundredth of one per cent of civilization, to take their fibers where they want them at any price they please to pay. These few men have exercised modern business ability and now set the price of wool and all the clothing of the world.

It is an awful power to concede to a few. It is dangerous and has proved ruinous for the sheep men and every person on earth who buys a woolen garment. Not satisfied with fair profits on this wool, working to lower it still more and advance cloth, these men took on rage to substitute it and fully three-quarters of all the so-called "woolens" on the market, or bought during the past two years, (Continued On Page Ten)

LIQUOR STOCKS IN WAREHOUSES UNAFFECTED BY COURT'S RULING

Wayne B. Wheeler, General Counsel For Anti-Saloon League So Declares

EXPLAINS SITUATION

Says There Are Plenty of Ways to Prevent Leakage of Bonded Stock

COLUMBUS, Nov. 27.—The thirsty who expect to get liquor out of bonded warehouses for private use are likely to meet disappointment in the belief expressed here today by Wayne B. Wheeler, of Washington, D. C., general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League of America. Attorney Wheeler came here to attend a meeting of officials of the league.

"The decision of the supreme court does not cover bonded warehouse liquors, except those actually in the possession of the person who had such liquors in a private warehouse room under his exclusive control and for his personal use," said Wheeler.

"Such liquors are tax paid and not under the control of the government. It is doubtful if liquors in a public warehouse, even if tax is paid, where the owner does not have them in his possession and access to them at any time, come within the decision."

"There are other means available under the transportation clause and the permit system if used properly to prevent a great amount of liquor from being withdrawn, or transported to evade the purpose of the law, which is expressly stated 'to prevent the use of intoxicating liquor as a beverage.'"

"The permit system has not been administered as carefully as it should have been, but the law enforcements are tightening up, and officials are revoking permits that are abused. The conditions will get better from now on. All permits expire next month and there will be a house cleaning."

MAYOR INDICATES CHARGES WILL BE PLACED AGAINST DRIVER OF TRUCK

Mayor W. S. Tish said Saturday that he probably would take action against R. A. Dell, Canton, alleged owner of the Studebaker truck that was wrecked on the West Lafayette road near the Miller schoolhouse last Wednesday afternoon, fatally injuring James Lawton, Detroit, for unlawfully having in his possession and on his machine a license plate that bore the figures 71,699. The state records show the license in question was issued to James L. Barker, Columbus, owner of a Ford truck.

The mayor is expected to take action against Dell soon.

The mayor did not state the direct charge that will be preferred.

The 66 hams removed from the truck were stored away at a farmhouse on the West Lafayette road last Wednesday following the accident. They were shipped to Canton Saturday by the Armour Swift agency by Russell Hanlon of the Hanlon undertaking establishment.

Roger Williams, Religious Liberal

SAID THEODORE ROOSEVELT one time: "Roger Williams embodies the best traits of Americanism, past and present, and all will be well with our future if the basic principles represented in the life of this glorious pioneer continue to be typical of all things American."

Oscar S. Straus, Secretary of Commerce and Labor in the Roosevelt cabinet and thrice our ambassador to Turkey declared: "If I were asked to select from all the great men who have left their impress upon this continent from the days that the Puritan Pilgrims set foot on Plymouth Rock, * * * if I were asked whom to hold before the American people and the world to typify the American spirit of fairness, of freedom, of liberty in church and state, I would without any hesitation select that great prophet who established the first political community on the basis of a free church in a free state, the great and immortal Roger Williams."

Similar expressions of esteem and respect have been extended to this great man from the days of our Revolutionary fathers to the present. Without doubt his life work has imposed as deep an imprint on the character of our institutions as any one man in the early colonial history of the New World. And for this reason it is peculiarly fitting that in any celebration of the Pilgrim Fathers the name of Roger Williams be not omitted.

It is true Williams was not a passenger on the Mayflower. He came in 1631, eleven years after his Puritan brethren. And when he came he found to his consternation that these men and women who had left England in defense of the right of every man to worship as his own conscience should dictate, had already established their religion by law and were vigorously prosecuting anyone who dared dissent from their beliefs.

Immediately upon his arrival he was offered the pastorate of the Boston church. In those eleven years the Pilgrims had prospered. The wounds of that never to be forgotten first winter had largely healed. Their honesty, their industry, their thrift and their inflexible justice, as they saw it, had prospered them above rival colonies to the south which were greatly favored above them by nature.

The pastorate which was offered Williams was the best in New England. It now offered the greatest field for advancement and perfectment in the religious life of New England. Yet he immediately renounced it when the true conditions surrounding it and the religious life of the colony became apparent to him. He plainly told the heads of the church that he could never conscientiously bind himself to the decrees of a legally established church nor accept its pastorate nor a membership in it.

For this Cotton Mather declared that, "Williams is a madman and has a windmill in his head." And yet it would have been better for New England and America if more madmen with windmills in their heads had sided with Williams at that time, instead of waiting the better part of a century as they did. But he was obdurate in his stand and thus became the first American who uncompromisingly advocated the total separation of church and state.

At a time when the Old World was a seething mass of religious persecution and discontent and the New World was fast becoming steeped in intolerance, when there was no historical precedent to steer him, and his only recourse and guide was his own intelligence and his own conscience, Roger Williams founded the first colony that made religious liberty a reality instead of a mockery and was able to offer to all men, Christian and Jew, Catholic and Protestant, Gentile, Turk and agnostic, an actual religious haven where all men were free to think and speak and worship as they pleased.

From the first the Indians believed implicitly in Williams. And when the people of his own race in Boston and Salem brutally banished him in the middle of an extreme New England winter, he sought refuge with his red-skinned friends in the forest. Nor did these children of nature forsake him. They sheltered and fed him thru the long, hard winter and subsequently, when the Puritan settlers were threatened with extinction by the so-called savages, it was Roger Williams, with true Christian tolerance, who used his own unbounded influence with the Indians, made long journeys from tribe to tribe and finally dissuaded chiefs and warriors from the well laid plot which would have wiped out every trace of Puritanism in America.

Williams then founded his colony on land actually purchased from the Indians and vigorously fought the bigotry and intolerance of his own people. He refused to recant his "heresies" about the freedom of the soul. He stoutly maintained that no civil magistrate had a right to enforce any human interpretation of the first four commandments, the four involving the individual's duty toward God. For these and other sins against the established order he was not only tried for heresy against the established church, but for treason to the state.

Williams then was banished and founded a colony at Providence, R. I., for the oppressed of all faiths and all nations. And for years the persecuted from every quarter of Europe, and from various parts of America as well, fled to the haven established by this "rebel Puritan" on the lands of the Narragansetts. To the end he held out for freedom of conscience and genuine political liberty.

It is true the church founded by the Puritans in America was a vast improvement over the one they had forsaken in England. Yet they implanted in the New World the basic wrong of church establishments from which grew the inevitable intolerances and bigotries which marred the life of both the new and the old. As has been well said of him:

"There was not a creed formulated by any Protestant reformer prior to Roger Williams, which explicitly challenged the right of civil power in religious concerns. As soon as Roger Williams set foot upon American soil he found himself in conflict with the highest civil and religious authorities. He could not endure to see his brethren persecuted for conscience's sake. He protested when the civil magistrate meddled with religious obligations. He wanted America to be the home of the free and an asylum for the oppressed of Europe."

When he himself was driven out of Massachusetts, he founded such a republic in miniature, and it has now grown into a giant. "The divers new and dangerous opinions" for which Roger Williams was banished by the Puritan commonwealth have become the chief cornerstone of the great American Republic. Impartial historians accord him the honor and rank of 'the first great American,' and 'the American apostle of soul liberty.'"

JOE WELLING SHOWS UNHEARD-OF NERVE IN LEONARD BOUT

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—Kid Lavigne made history in his battle with Joe Wolkoff at Maspeth, L. I., years ago. Batting Nelson started the world with his stout heart later, but last night Joe Welling topped them all when he fought toe to toe with Benny Leonard and only stopped when nature left him flat.

For 12 rounds the lion hearted Welling traded punch for punch with his younger and more gifted opponent. He carried the fight to his man, took all that he had to offer and never once made a backward step.

Round after round Welling weathered terrificistic storms. Occasionally he shook the champion up and at other times made the great Leonard look like a novice, as he missed rights and lefts.

Benny's face grew paler as the fight went on and on. He pulled at his tight nervously, looked at his corner wonderingly and then anxiously eyed the top-headed boy from Chicago.

Welling fought well until the 18th. Then he slowed up a second. That second was his undoing. A left that had the speed of a lightning flash shot to his chin and Welling measured his length on the blood-covered canvas.

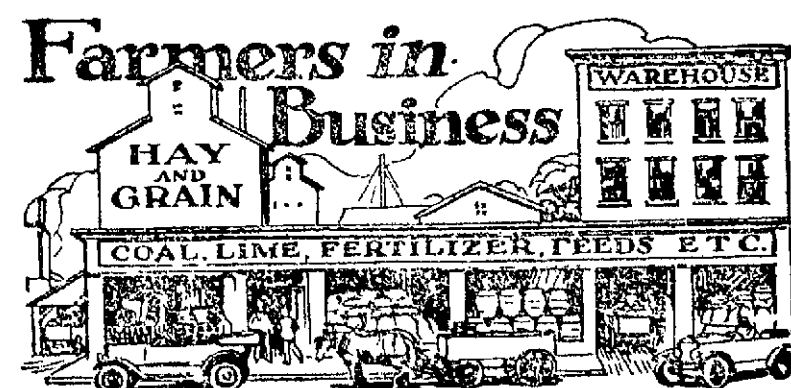

He got up, but looked like the shipping board. He was all at sea. Leonard had a clear shot at him. He

(National Crop Improvement Service)

THE most businesslike organization the farmers have ever established is the Farmers' National Grain Dealers' association, which will hold its annual convention at the Hotel La Salle in Chicago on December 2 and 3.

There are 4,600 farmers' elevators in the country, 75 per cent of which belong to the association. They handle a billion bushels of grain annually, and represent an investment of $100,000,000, with 500,000 farmer stockholders.

They do an annual business of about $250,000 in furnishing fertilizers, flour, feed, lime, coal, lumber, fence posts, etc., to the members, and they now plan to absorb the entire output of certain factories, if necessary. Twelve states have organizations. Ohio and Illinois each have a commercial service capitalized at $100,000, and Iowa is organizing a million dollar company. Indiana and Oklahoma each have purchasing agents along the same lines and an effort will be made to combine all of this service on a national basis.

The state associations have already obtained first-hand service on the grain exchanges by establishing commission companies at Minneapolis, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Indianapolis and Hutchinson, Kan.

and arrangements are being made in Chicago and the other markets to form commission houses and to purchase or lease terminal grain elevators for conditioning, mixing, transferring, storing and merchandising grain.

Secretary Meredith will address the convention on a plan for collecting world-wide grain information and placing grain experts in different districts, who shall transmit crop conditions by cable. The association will employ its own crop expert to digest this information and get it promptly to the stockholders.

Farmers' elevators are being organized at the rate of about ten a week, the state association assisting by furnishing by-laws, advising proper legal procedure and supplying a well-posted speaker and obtaining experienced managers. The state associations do not send out solicitors, as experience has proven that unless the stockholders raise the money themselves and run the business it will probably fail.

H. R. Meisch of Argyle, Minn., is president of the national association; John Miller of Gales, Ill., vice president; and Frank M. Myers of Port Dodge, Ia., secretary. The educational and publicity department is located at 808 South Dearborn street, Chicago.

Get a CaloriC and Keep Warm

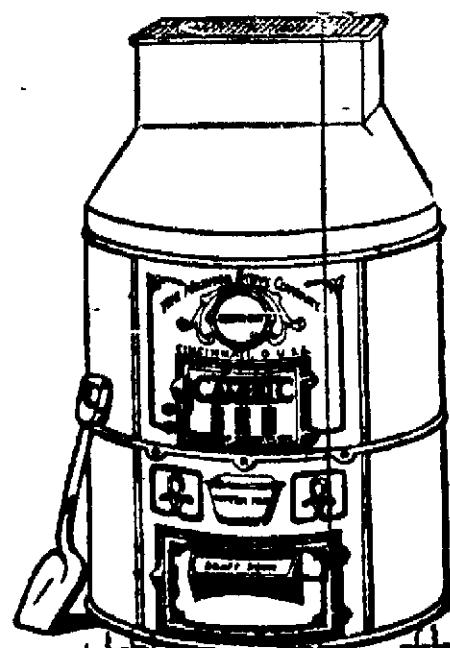

There is but one CaloriC Pipeless Furnace. Don't expect a lifetime of CaloriC comfort and fuel economy by merely buying a "pipeless furnace" which is hastily and unscientifically put together to meet the demand created by CaloriC prestige. Investigate and learn the facts of CaloriC success in over 100,000 homes and you will not be satisfied with less than CaloriC superiority.

The natural gas supply of the country is dwindling. The shortage was keenly felt in many localities last winter—and gas companies have warned consumers that it will likely become serious this winter. Can you afford to take chances of having no heat when cold weather comes?

The CaloriC Pipeless Furnace is the solution of the problem. It can be installed in a day without plumbing or alteration of your home—does not interfere with your present heating system—and requires very little space in the basement. It has no pipes, but supplies heat for your entire home through one register. Saves 1-3 to 1-2 your fuel.

—We will install a CaloriC in your home on the fair and square guarantee of your satisfaction or money back. Visit our store and see the CaloriC and let us explain its patented features which cannot be had in any imitation pipeless furnaces.

Love's Miracle

By ALDEN CHAPMAN

(63, 1929, Western Newspaper Union)
"I'll take the farm and pay cash for it," said Bert Noble. "How did you come to purchase it?"
"I got it on a foreclosure," answered William Breen. "I don't operate it myself. It is leased to the man who runs it. You see, Horace Mayworth, the former owner, lost all he had in foolish speculation. The present lease hires him to manage the farm, for Mayworth knows how to do that. His wife is dead, his sons married and moved away and his daughter works for and lives with a milliner in the village."
"As I too well know," muttered Noble between his set teeth, and his eyes gleamed venomously. "Ah! nothing could suit me better than to pay back Horace Mayworth for the wretchedness he infused into my life when I was his employee. It was more like being a slave."

It was ten years since Noble had been at Clyde and he had returned so changed that no one had so far recognized him. He now paid $500 down as forfeit money. He had left Clyde hating the whole world. An almshouse pauper, Mayworth had taken him into his service only to work him nearly to death, to abuse him, to persecute him. He had broken all the spirit there was in the poor lad, and at last, hating him bitterly, the place all about, the indifferent and despising community, Noble had gone forth an outcast morally and mentally with distorted views of the world.

He had led the life after that of a miner in the very worst district of the West. He had gambled, had himself become a figure among those he could intimidate. Hard-hearted, with no innate human sympathy, he had acquired a fair fortune and had wandered back to the scenes of his youth, he knew scarcely why.

A fierce joy possessed him when he learned of the misfortune that had overtaken Horace Mayworth. Ah! what satisfying recompense in finding his enemy fallen. There flashed through the thoughts of Noble an impulse to secure mastery over the old farm and its former owner, to oppress, to humiliate, to revengefully cause him to atone for all the wrongs he had wrought upon him in the past. Even a memory of the kindly friendship of the daughter, Irene, in his early boyhood days, did not assuage or divert the resolve to pay back that old score of oppression and abuse that had poisoned the whole life of Noble.

So the returned wanderer allowed no one to meet him and none recognized him. He floated over fancied revenge anticipating the rare pleasure he would experience in punishing the man he so fervently hated. Point by point, detail by detail he planned and plotted and cherished the climax moment when he should see Horace Mayworth driven forth a pauper and friendless.

One rainy evening he attired himself in an enveloping coat and wore a hat pulled well down over his eyes. There had come to him a great curiosity to once more see Irene Mayworth. After ten years the inspection through the store window was a revelation to him. She had grown superlatively beautiful and as he watched her, she all unsuspecting, he recalled how in that dull, dark past she had been the one person who had taken the interest of pitying friendship in him. Two men had paused under the store awning to escape the rain. He heard one of them speak Irene's name and moved nearer. "The grandest girl in Clyde," spoke the man. "They say she has paid up every dollar of some old indebtedness of her father, buys him his clothes and otherwise cares for him with tenderness and fidelity."

"My wife told me last week that Miss Mayworth was providing for a poor family here, and she helps the girls at the factory by working nights to trim their hats for nothing."

Half a dozen evenings Bert Noble visited the vicinity of the millinery store. Somehow it became a species of fascination to him. Somehow, too the angelic influence of this courageous, bright souled victim of misfortune softened his mood. She, too, had suffered, but amid her desolation love and sympathy had sustained and gladdened her.

Bert Noble changed all his mean, malicious plans of revenge in a single hour. He completed the purchase of the farm and appeared publicly. He manifested himself to Irene and she welcomed his return with genuine gladness. One day Noble went to see Mayworth. It was to hand him a deed to his former hatted possessions. The old man broke down with contrition, with a gratitude that seemed to bring a blessing and peace and new life in pulses to Noble.

Instead of perpetrating a base revenge Bert Noble awarded peace and contentment to the last days of Horace Mayworth. The latter went around a new man, confessing his past errors, speaking as tenderly of Noble as though he were his own son.

What could come of all this but the old bonds of youthful friendship cemented into the more lasting ties of love with the grateful Irene and the yearning Noble. It was a new romance built upon the old, and ere it had culminated there had come to the wanderer a purification that swept away all the evil impulses of the past and gave to him a life companion whose love irradiated all the future.

dramatic episode than occurred today when William H. McGannon, chief justice of the municipal court of Cleveland since its foundation in 1912, appeared before Common Pleas Judge Frank S. Day to enter his plea of not guilty to the charge of second degree murder.

The courtroom was literally packed to the doors. The motley throng that watched a judge enter a plea to an indictment charging felony was composed of men and women from all walks of life. The man with a prison record brushed shoulders with the preacher; the woman of the streets sat side by side with the leader in movements for community betterment.

"Prisoner at the bar, how plea you?" rang out the old formula, as the clerk finished reading the indictment to the prisoner.

"Not guilty," was the prompt reply.

"The trial will begin on Tuesday, December 14, before Judge Frank S. Day. McGannon's bond was signed by himself and Mrs. Irene Kilbane, a relative of Johnny Kilbane, the boxer. The formalities of giving bail, which had been previously fixed at $10,000 did not take long.

The crime for which Judge McGannon stands indicted is one which has stirred this city a few murder cases have done. Harold C. Kagy, garage owner, after spending the evening in company with Judge McGannon and John W. Joyce, a saloon keeper, was shot at the corner of east Ninth and Hamilton streets on the early morning of May 1 last, dying afterwards in a hospital.

Joyce was indicted, the evidence tending to show his guilt being statements made by Kagy at the time and evidence showing that he carried a gun on the night in question.

McGannon was a witness at the Joyce trial. He asserted that he was not present when the shot was fired, having left Joyce and Kagy a few minutes previously to take a car for his home.

Other witnesses asserted that he was the third man present when the shot was fired, and at least one positively declared that he fired the fatal shot.

The second grand jury investigation covered a wide range, and it is said that Judge Gannon's trial will among other things uncover activities in illicit liquor traffic.

Cleveland club women have displayed great interest in this case since testimony at the Kagy trial linked Judge McGannon's name with the crime.

"THE WISHING RING"

Tuneful musical numbers, brilliant dialogue, beautiful dancing and spectacular features will make "The Wishing Ring," the bewitching musical extravaganza, one of the biggest hits of the season. With a cast of good dancers and singers, the opera will be staged at the Sixth Street theater on Tuesday and Wednesday. When the curtain rises on the beautiful and spectacular operetta, the probabilities are that the best audience that has ever assembled at Coshocton will be present to enjoy it as the advance sale has been fine and indicates capacity houses at all performances.

"The Wishing Ring" has been pronounced by the press and public to be one of the best musical extravaganzas ever staged by amateurs. And Miss Brinkham thinks the performances here will eclipse anything previously staged under her management, as the characters are "letter perfect" in their respective roles. The opera will have a professional tone, which is entirely lacking in many of the so-called "professional companies."

Taking all in all, the affair promises to be the one real event in amateur theatricals in Coshocton this season.

"UP IN MABEL'S ROOM"

"Up in Mabel's Room," the farce which kept all New York laughing for months, last season, will be presented at the Sixth Street theater on Monday evening under the direction of J. H. Woods. The play has been described as a frivolous farce of romantic comedy and in the words of the author, Otto Harbach, "it is a play about a man on Long Island. The story of the play deals with the life of a young man, Garry Alenworth, who is a bachelor who is a bachelor, an old bachelor, and a bachelor in this case is a pink chemise which he had unwittingly given to a beautiful and charming widow of whom he had been fond in his bachelor days. This chemise was unfortunately inscribed "Mabel's Room" and the slightly jealous and exceedingly mischievous Mabel threatened to show it to Garry's wife. Garry pleaded, coaxed and cajoled in an effort to get the chemise back, and finally decided to steal it. More difficulties arose than he dreamed of and in the course of his adventures, he found himself in a situation after situation, painful to himself, but that furnished the greatest delight to his audience. How the faithful chemise was finally captured and Garry's troubles brought to an end, cannot be divulged without detracting from the interest of the play. "Up in Mabel's Room" is as full of fun as any farce in recent years. The production is a costly and elaborate one and the company carefully selected. The management guarantees this show to be clean in every respect.

SILVER NET AND FILET LACE COMBINE IN THIS DELICATE COSTUME BLOUSE

Here is one of the most charming of the season's blouses. It is developed in dull silver net with a front panel or vestee of filet lace. The blouse is collarless, as are so many of the new models, but it has small cuffs of the filet net.

One Hundred Percent

The expression "One Hundred Percent" has been in common use lately. Schools and college circles, in large business offices, in fact wherever there is any competition an effort has been made to obtain "100 Percent" rating. There is no reason why every man, woman and child should not have "100 Percent" health rating. The human body is the most perfect machine in existence — something goes wrong, you are sick, unable to sleep, cannot enjoy your food, your body is wracked with pain, you are extremely nervous. The cause can invariably be traced to subluxated (displaced) vertebrae (small bones of spine) pinching the nerves preventing "100 Percent" normal flow of vital nerve force to the different organs of the body. Chiropractic Adjustments removes this pressure. 100 Percent Health is the result.

Child-Heroine In De Mille Picture

Thos. Meighan Likes Leading Ladies in "The Prince Chap"

It is a happy coincidence that Thomas Meighan, whose love for children is well known out in the California movie colony, should have been chosen to play the hero in "The Prince Chap," William De Mille's notable screen production of Edward Peple's famous play of the same name. It will be the photoplay attraction at the Pastime theater next Monday and Tuesday.

The heroine Claudia in "The Prince Chap" first appears as a child of four years. This role is charmingly enacted by pretty Peaches Jackson. Claudia at the age of eight is interpreted by May Gracie, a little dusky beauty from Italy. And Claudia, budding into glorious womanhood, finds an attractive counterpart on the screen in Lila Lee.

"I never had a better time," laughed Mr. Meighan recently, "and I never got along with a leading woman so well as I did with my three in 'The Prince Chap.'"

The story is laid in the London aristocratic colony and is said to strike a deeply human note unusual in photoplays.

Thomas Meighan has the role of the hero, and Lila Lee, Theodore Kosloff, Charles Ogle, Casson Ferguson and Kathryn Williams are also in the cast. It is a Paramount Art Craft picture.

"Your Jeweler"

THE MODEL GUEST

"MY COUSIN James is coming to spend a week," announced the landlady, "and I can't say I'm overjoyed. He's the most unsatisfactory visitor I ever saw. You can hardly get a word out of him. He isn't a bit like his brother Jeremiah, who is full of fun, and the best company imaginable."

"Your remarks show how little true greatness is appreciated in a moral family boarding house, where the damages are collected in advance," observed the star boarder. "In my opinion, James is the model visitor. If I had my own household, with a charming bride to pour the imitation coffee, and a vine and figtree in a jardiniere, I'd send a special delivery letter to James, asking him to come and stay for ten years or more."

"There's something restful and soothing about that gifted man. He never bothers anybody. No one has to waste precious moments entertaining him. It isn't necessary to discuss the weather predictions, or dig up a lot of statistics about the crops, in order to make James have a good time. You don't have to show him the old plush photograph album, and describe the ancestry of the melancholy effigies whose pictures appear therein. Nearly all visitors are bores, my dear Mrs. Jiggers, because they have to be entertained. Somebody has to sit up with them and thrash out last year's gossip. They have no initiative or referendum. They have no resource of their own. In order to have a pleasant visit, they need help."

"Your cousin James is a man after my own heart. I remember his last visit quite well. He came in the evening, and after supper he took a chair on the porch. Knowing he was a guest, I felt it my duty to entertain him in the conventional way. I dragged my chair close up to his and remarked that it was a pleasant evening, but the presence of a cloud bank in the northwest almost convinced me that there would be rain within twelve hours. In which case, I proceeded, there would be much jubilation among the honest old farmers, whose crops were suffering for moisture."

"James listened to my remarks and then looked at me. In a sad, reproachful way, as though he thought it a shameful thing that imbeciles should be at large, and then he took his chair to the opposite end of the porch without having said a word. I must confess that I felt like a counterfeit kopeck for a few minutes, but the more I considered the matter, the more I admired and respected that remarkable man."

"He used to go downtown every morning and buy a paper backed novel, or a fiction magazine, and then he'd read it all day, and when he was done with his literature he left it where the boarders could get it. I didn't hear him say ten words during his visit, yet you say, Mrs. Jiggers, that he is an unsatisfactory guest. Elderly landladies, whose intellects have been warped by long years of parsimony, are hard to please."

"Jeremiah, whom you describe as jolly and agreeable, should be suppressed. He has collected all the old cheese-stories ever manufactured, and insists upon telling them. He has a horrible habit of making puns, and considers himself a humorist, because of it. You couldn't believe him to sit down with a book or magazine and behave himself. He has to be entertained every minute of his time and the only way you can entertain him is by letting him do the entertaining."

"He is a genial old freak who thinks he is a privileged character, and everybody's pet. The last time he was here he went into my sumptuous apartment and used my razor to shave the southeast quarter section of his countenance. His whiskers are full of barbed wire, and the razor was ruined. When I spoke to him about it he thought it funny. Yet you refer to such a man as an agreeable visitor. I blush for you, Mrs. Jiggers."

In Moderation.

"Would you advise a candidate to stay on his front porch?" "Yes," answered Senator Sorghum; "but only part of the time; just long enough to take care of his voice and get together a good bunch of speeches for delivery on tour."

Just It.

"I thought you said you had a fine ending to your automobile trip." "So I had." "Your chauffeur told me you were arrested for speeding." "Well, wouldn't you call a windup in the police court a fine ending?"

ARMY AND NAVY GAME ENDS THE FOOTBALL SEASON

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—With a crowd of more than 25,000 enthusiasts cheering them on the Army and Navy football teams will ring down the curtain on a brilliant season here today.

Always colorful, always a spectacle marked with pomp and military splendor, today's game promised to measure up to traditions. The only uncertain element was the weather, the forecaster promising overcast skies with moderate and variable winds.

Early in the day, however, rain threatened.

Today's battle between the service elevens will be the 25th they have played over a period of thirty years.

Of this number of games Army has won 11 and Navy 10 while one game has resulted in a tie score.

Navy supporters felt confident that the midshipmen would even up with the Cadets today by winning for the second consecutive time. Earlier in the season Navy sympathizers would not have felt so confident because the Middies did not look so strong. Since the Navy played Princeton, however, sentiment has changed and Coach Folwell's proteges went into today's game favorites over the Army at odds of 11 to 10 with Army supporters asking 8 to 5 and getting it in some cases.

Regardless of the outcome of the game it was certain that the big crowd would see two teams fit to struggle to the last ditch. Both elevens arrived here Friday and during the afternoon both worked out on the Polo ground gridiron. After the workout Coach Folwell of the middies said that his varsity eleven was in the best possible shape and predicted that the Navy would win today's game.

Coach Charles Dady of the Army was not so confident, but admitted that Army's players were in the best condition.

Navy is admitted to have the better line while Army is conceded the best backfield. In the Navy's line there is one man whom the Army fears. He is Clyde King, from Iowa, who kicked two field goals against Army last fall and accounted for the tenth victory of the Middies. If Navy is unable to crash thru the Army defense today King will be called upon to bring his educated toe into play, just as he did the season Navy sympathizers would a year ago.

O (National Crop Improvement Service) L. D. PETER GOODMAN says that if it was not for hog cholera, drought and early frosts the world would have so much to eat that we would not have to work but about one year in six.

However, the farmer who has a crop failure or loses his hogs is not consoled by any such thought. As it is, we can raise three billion bushels of corn almost any year on corn land which has been abused for fifty years.

Some farmers select their seed corn from the bin by looking at it, and yet while there are a good many can tell what kind of an ear won't grow, not one in a thousand can select an ear that will grow without giving it a germination test.

Another smart lot of farmers will in husking run across good ears of corn and hang them up on the wind mill or out under the eaves of the porch, never thinking of the risk they are taking. Even though September be bright and sunny and the corn dried out beautifully, yet the ears are not taken in and cared for, but left out in the fall rains, damp, drizzling days, where they again become soaked with moisture and turning cold at night, Jack Frost says "good-bye, seed corn."

"The best place to select seed corn is in the field," says Mr. Frank Backes, V. P. American Steel & Wire Co., "while the stalk can be taken into consideration."

"The ears should be carefully protected on wire or string, so that each ear will stand separate from its neighbor. A room over the kitchen or in the attic of a heated house, with good ventilation at each side, is an ideal place to dry and preserve seed corn. A wise farmer will always select twice as much as he really needs, and keep over enough for a second planting in case of crop failure."

"Be careful to screen out the rats and mice or you may find no corn" when you look for it in the spring."

Army boasts of a star who commands the respect of the Navy. He is Walter French of Morristown, N. J., who ranks as one of the greatest backs in the country. This French is a football player from the ground up. He is the speediest man on either service team, a great line smasher, a wonderful open field runner, and a kicker of unusual ability.

"Watch French," was the Navy watchword as the teams got ready for the battle.

YOUR OLD FAVORITE SONG

YOU have heard it so often that it awakens little emotion. But when a famous singer renders it with all the refinements of a highly cultivated voice, and with all the technique of the professional, that's another thing.

—Your affection for the old song stirs afresh, and you want to hear it over and over again.

—That's the way you feel when you hear the Puritan Phonograph.

—You have been so used to hearing phonographs that have short tone chambers that you think they are all much alike in tone quality. But when you hear the same pieces rendered by this wonderful instrument you experience a different sensation.

—The Puritan plays any disc record, so you have the entire range of phonograph music to select from. Besides, the long wood horn eliminates all scratching, hissing noises and you hear only pure, sweet tones as in the original production.

Daily demonstrations are given here for everyone who appreciates good music well played or sung. Come in—any time.

ART LIBRARY A NEW IDEA

A circulating library of pictures instead of books, has recently been opened by the Y. W. C. A. of Brooklyn, N. Y. Good reproductions of the best pictures of today and earlier periods are kept on hand to be loaned out for two weeks or a month. Accompanying each picture is a brief account of the artist's life, the significance of the painting and data about the school and period of art to which the artist belongs. The idea behind the scheme is to familiarize the subscribers with some of the best examples of art which they might not otherwise obtain and which they may eventually want to own after having lived with them a short time.

BELVEDERES PLAN FOR FIFTH SHOW AT SIXTH STREET

The Belvederes will stage their fifth big annual minstrel at the Sixth Street theater in the near future. About 50 characters, including the best talent in the city will have prominent parts in this production.

The director who will produce the show is one who has personally had the experience of acting in big minstrels and other shows. He is highly recommended. The director has picked most of the parts for the talented young men and women and the first rehearsal will be held in the Belvedere club rooms Monday evening.

The prominent parts are well divided among the ladies and gentlemen of the cast. The black face comedians who are the premier funmakers in the show, are requested to be present at the rehearsal this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock.

PHI SIGNS WIN FROM ALPHAS BY 14 TO 7 SCORE

The Phi Sigma Chi defeated the Alpha Pi at the fair ground gridiron Saturday afternoon in the last game of the season by the score of 14 to 7. T. Williams at left half for the Sigs intercepted Brode's forward pass in the second quarter and ran 50 yards for a touchdown. Williams also kicked goal. The Sigs scored their second touchdown on the Alphas when Reed, playing right half crossed the goal line on T. Williams' perfect forward pass. Tommy again kicked goal.

The Sigs held the Alphas scoreless until the last quarter of the game. Robson holding down right half for the Alpha Pi's made a pretty end run of 15 yards and went across the enemy's goal line for the one and only Alpha touchdown. Brode kicked the goal. The game ended shortly after the final score was made for the Alphas.

Both fraternity teams showed snap and ginger and an excellent game prevailed from the first to the last quarter of the game. There were no picked stars of the game. Each player on the two sides played to the best of his ability.

This game of football will probably be the final of the autumn sport. The lineup:

FIVE COSHOCTON-CO TEACHERS ATTEND ASSOCIATION MEET

The fiftieth annual session of the Eastern Ohio Teachers' Association was held at East Liverpool Friday and Saturday, November 26-27. Among the county teachers who were there, were Superintendent Fred Elder from Blissfield, and Superintendent H. B. Pigman, of Warsaw. Jesse Kinner, a county man who is superintendent of Frazeeburg schools attended.

There are approximately 2900 teachers enrolled in the organization, but owing to the meeting coming during a holiday season the attendance was just a trifle over one-half of that number.

The teachers who attended from the Coshocton schools were Misses Helen McMannis and Dorothy Davis and Superintendent O. B. Clifton. Each of these teachers took an active part in the program given by the association.

A Luckless Chevalier

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

"If you will be advised by me, don't go, Eva," spoke Wynne Gresham. "Oh, I am tired of advice," pouted Eva petulantly. "You men are all alike. You deem your mighty selves so lofty minded that you list women with children as to having any independent common sense."

"I simply expressed an opinion, not a dictum, not even a wish. You are young, artless, impulsive, Eva, and I think only of your good."

So prettily did Eva pout that Gresham was more fascinated than ever. "She will learn in time to be practical," Gresham told himself hopefully though with a suppressed sigh.

Eva chafed at advice and resented opposition to her own ideas, and this was the only defect in her character that had caused Gresham anxiety. Amiable generally, truthful, sincere, the finer points in her temperament had won him completely. Tacitly it was mentally accepted by both that affairs were leading on to a settled engagement.

Some girl friends had suggested a two nights' camping out on Bear Island, located in the center of a lake in a rough lonely district some miles from Granville. Gresham had told Eva there were elements of risk and discomfort in the affair.

"But we expect you to go, too, Wynne," said Eva. "We should have little fear with such a pilot and defender."

"I shall have to be away from home the week end," explained Gresham.

Nothing more was said about the situation then, but Eva's perversity hurried forth when she met her bosom friend, Amy Desbrow, an hour later. "I am going, just the same," she said with set lips and defiant eye. "Wynne Gresham is not quite my master. We won't change our program, Amy, only we must find a new chevalier."

"My cousin, Ned Tyrrell, is at the house on a week's visit. You remember him, Eva?"

"Oh yes," nodded Eva with a faint blush. "Ned was my first beau, you know. Of course it was boy and girl nonsense, but he was real nice to me. That will just do."

Ned Tyrrell was only too glad to be nice to Eva when he proudly accepted his appointment as manager and director of the camping function. He brought his own little tent and posted it on the high point of observation on the island some sixty feet away from the sheltered cove where the girls made camp. He rigged up a tackle that would ring a bell in his quarters if any alarm signal was needed after he had left their nights.

There were several accidents reaching the island and getting the camp in order. As usual Eva dominated the proposition. She had first suggested the outing and was the acknowledged leader. In Ned Tyrrell she found a placid, readily molded slave to all her whims. When out in the boat she suggested taking a certain course to reach the island, he nodded agreeably and proceeded to carry out her orders.

"Just as you say, Eva," he agreed and did not grumble when they found themselves imprisoned in a net work of reeds and weeds, losing two hours' time extricating themselves from the dilemma.

It was Eva's fault that the tents were placed so that later they caught the ill effects of a sudden windstorm. Always and ever, however, the parrot pronouncements of the impractical Tyrrell were demonstrated with the lifeless, motionless:

"Just as you say, Eva."

At first the willing obedience of this slave-like escort pleased Eva. It was such a contrast to Gresham's way, always arguing that she was wrong. But there came a climax the second night of their stay on the island that for all time convinced Eva that Tyrrell, however pliable as an accommodating man, was indeed a broken reed.

There came up an early morning storm that drove the tents flat. Drenched, miserable, a further depression came when the girls discovered that during the night someone had carried away a chest in which was stored all their extra clothing and jewelry. Investigation showed that a lot of geyases had visited the island in the darkness. Tyrrell started in pursuit quite valiantly, but did not overtake them.

"Home, the shortest and quickest way," was the imperative order of the discomfited Eva the next morning.

"Just as you say, Eva," came the now harassing repetition of the weak-spirited chevalier of the party.

"Don't ever tell publicly of the abominable time we have had," pleaded Eva with her girl friends.

Ned Tyrrell proposed marriage the next day, but departed with a gloomy face and the inevitable:

"Just as you say, Eva."

Wynne Gresham wondered at a new docility displayed by the humbled Eva after that. It was some time before he learned the details of the distressing outing. One day when Eva had indignantly volunteered for his decision on some trivial matter, his eyes flickered mischievously as he began:

"Just as you say—"

"Don't make me cry, Wynne," pleaded Eva contritely. "It shall always be as you say, after this."

How Did It Get There?

A massive chair, made of copper, which natives believe was given by the late Queen Victoria to an Ashanti chieftain and used by him as a throne, has been discovered in the midst of a jungle far from human habitation in the Gold Coast colony of Africa.

POWDER PLANT LETS GO; TOWN DESTROYED
AND 7 ARE KILLED

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Seven persons were killed when the big Verigate powder house 40 miles outside Milan, Italy, blew up at noon yesterday.

First word of the disaster did not reach London until today. The whole little town built around the powder works was wiped out by the explosion and thousands are homeless. The railroad bridge on the Domo-Dossola line was wrecked by the blast, which was heard for miles around.

BANDITS GIVE NEW YORK REAL THRILL

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—In broad day light four highwaymen today robbed David Taylor, a clerk, of $60,000 worth of diamonds at 49th street and Seventh-av. just a few blocks from the heart of New York's great white way then leaped into a waiting taxicab and dashed off.

Saylor, an employee of the Providence Diamond company, had just taken the diamonds in two metal boxes from a safe deposit vault in the Pacific Bank at the corner of 49th-st. and Seventh-av. within a stone's throw of the gayest and busiest center of all New York. He was crossing the street and just reaching the other side when the quartet, all wearing "the typical "gunman's cap" bounced upon him.

One of them struck a smashing blow at his face. Another pulled out a revolver and held it under the half-fainting man's nose, while the other two men grabbed the two boxes with their rich contents.

D. Burkan, a salesman who happened by, rushed to Saylor's aid but one of the bandits promptly covered him with a gun, threatening to kill him in another moment the quartet was off in a taxicab speeding northward to Fiftieth-st.

BREAD PRICES AWAIT DROP IN FLOUR MARKET

Local grocers are reported to be making some reductions in the price of bread. The popular sized 15c loaf is selling at 13 and 14 cents. This sized loaf of bread reached the price of 15 cents during the war and was selling at that price when wheat was quoted at $3.00. Wheat is now quoted at $1.70.

According to the drop of wheat it would seem that there should be a proportionate drop in the price of bread. Local bakers claim that as yet the price of flour has not decreased in proportion to the reduction in the market quotation on wheat, and until that time there will not be a decided drop in the price of any pastry.

CHICAGO LANDLORDS FIGHT TAX INCREASE

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Attempts which may be made to enact more stringent rent laws or increase taxation on apartment properties will be fought with a $200,000 fund which is being raised today by the landlords of Chicago.

The fund likewise will be used to fight efforts of janitors to obtain increases in wages. At a meeting of the Chicago real estate board it was decided to levy assessments against flat owners to provide a fund to combat unfavorable legislation on taxation and realty control.

Suggestions that the landlords gain the good will of the public by a voluntary reduction of rents were hooted down from the floor.

"We'll have to raise 'em," was the cry.

Leaders of the movement declared also the landlords would enter politics and work for the defeat of candidates who favor the passage of a bill increasing the tax rate.

or in the hands of the mills and larger shoddy is shoddy. The sheep men with their investment in land, labor and machinery have been competing against junk men with $10 in small change. The wool grower produced beautiful, serviceable fibers on the farm and the junk man produced "wool" in garbage piles.

See how America uses shoddy: When the armistice was signed the government owned all the wool, about 300,000,000 pounds. We clipped less than that. Imports were negligible in 1918 because there were few ships available and England grabbed everything. Last year we clipped again and statistics show we imported 400,000,000, total for two years, 260,000,000, and at last January 1st there were stocks of 700,000,000 pounds. During 1918 and 1919 there were but 560,000,000 pounds used, cut that in two for carpets, rugs, etc., and then scow the half for cloth and we have 140,000,000 pounds to make about one hundred million yards of cloth, or 30,000,000 suits without overcoats, for 110,000,000 people for 1918 and 1919. Besides this, cloth made by American mills was sold in almost every country on earth, even far away Teheran, in Central Asia, bought $60,000 worth.

While this was going on the wool piled up. Little wool is used except for yarn to carry shoddy and I have very nice looking cloth cut from a suit guaranteed "all wool," price $65, worn out in six months in which there is not one wool fiber. On the other hand, I write in a suit I husked corn in today, bought in 1903 for $25, and parts of it are nice as when new. The indolence and carelessness of consumers as well as sheep men accounts for this. Multitudes of men who grow good fibers are wearing counterfeit wool, wearing the depraved, short worn, smooth fibers from ground up rags. You can see them on the street in the office and at church.

After a survey of the above figures what more need is there to ask "What's the matter with wool?" There are 4,000,000,000 pounds of unused wool in the world three-quarters of which has piled up during the past two years while the mills used salvaged rags from the battlefields with the regular junk men's gleanings. Cutting this amount in two for cloth and allowing 8 pounds of raw wool for a suit, it would make but 240,000,000 suits needed at once, and if priced right would sell before winter is over. Ohio's 14,000,000 of "distress" wool would all be taken by Buckeyes before New Years. There is a world shortage of wool right now. There is more in Ohio than any size territory and it has not half enough.

Do you see how badly the sheep man and the clothing buyer needs a pure fabric law?

Do you see how necessary it is for the wool growers to bunch, to educate the people and compel shoddy to sell for the depraved counterfeit it is? Can you see that a chain of wool warehouses over the land, owned and operated by the growers, and mills owned and operated by wool growers and consumers, making virgin wool cloth in all the wool growing sections, would make a market for wool and clothe the people in good raiment? If this Ohio wool was in cloth, with a label on every yard "made from Ohio virgin wool." I would take the contract to sell it all, at a fair price, before a year at 25c a suit pattern.

Now what are the sheep men doing since we know the trouble? A few in every wool growing state are working hard, owners are working some, still others are putting one dollar into organization and many are doing nothing. Every man who buys clothes would make money to give $20 a year until adjustment. He is stung that much on every suit.

How are we doing? For myself, I have given about 50 days and 200 nights to help make a market for virgin wool and have used nearly $1000 of the Association's money for travel, printing and postage.

I have put the above line of thought into sheep men of other states, have sent personal letters, circulars and pamphlets and some one or some organization always "fell for them." We have 86000 city and town club ladies in Ohio, and others in all the states studying this matter. I went to the American Cotton association at Montgomery Ala. on "Friendship Between the Cotton and Wool Growers" and we will have a solid south to help us get pure fabric and tariff on wool. If all would work we could arrive shortly but we who are in it expect to live to see all the pasture where sheep should be, and much of the waste, high and mountain land carrying happy flocks, and seeing the public buying good woolsens lower than the present counterfeits.

NO ONE OFFERS MAYOR A DRINK

MARIETTA, Nov. 27.—Pity a poor mayor. No one ever offers him a drink.

Mayor Sprague, who also pronounces sentence on sundry offenders in the municipal court, made this confession here today.

Warren Roach, a Lebanon visitor, charged with intoxication and disorderly conduct, declared the hooch was given him gratis by an utter stranger.

"That doesn't look reasonable to me," his honor interrupted, "with whiskey selling for $10 and $12 a pint. No one ever offers me a drink 'Ten and costs."

THE FAMILY OF MURDERED LOS ANGELES MILLIONAIRE

The placing of a charge of the murder against Mrs. Richard Peete, housekeeper in the home of Jacob C. Denton, murdered Los Angeles mining man and millionaire, is taken as an indication that the solution of the mystery is near at hand. Denton disappeared June 3. His body was found late in September, buried in a shallow hole under the stairway in the basement of his palatial home. Miss Francis Denton, his daughter, becomes heiress to his fortune. She, her mother and Mrs. Merriman, Denton's sister, are remaining in the case.
